WARWICK.

In the suburb on the West side of the Town of Warwick stood the House of the Friars Preachers, who, Dugdale says, settled there toward the latter end of the reign of King Henry the Third. Dugdale states that in the 9th Edw. II. they purchased of Avicia de Pilandynton a certain piece of ground, containing a hundred and sixty feet in length and a hundred feet in breadth, adjoining thereto, for that purpose, and had the King's pardon for so doing. The like pardon had they in 18th Edw. III. for ten acres of land lying in Warwick, acquired of John de Peito the younger; as also for half an acre more of Thomas Beauchamp earl of Warwick, situate near their habitation, and to enlarge the same.<sup>f</sup> Leland says, "It was a large House, and the Botelers lords Sudeley and the Mountforts were founders of it, as I heard say, or rather great benefactors."<sup>g</sup> So likewise, Dugdale adds, was William Harewall, sometime of Wotton Warren, in the County of Warwick, Esquire, as appears by an Indenture made October 9th, 16 Hen. VII., between THOMAS LATIMER, Doctor of Divinity, Prior of the Friars Preachers here, and the said William; for in consideration of forty pounds sterling, which he gave to the repair of their Church, and other necessaries, they covenanted, that there should be a perpetual chantry, by one of the Friars thereof, to sing mass at the altar of St. Peter of Milan, in the said Church, betwixt the hours of nine and ten every day, for the good estate of the said William and Agnes his wife, whilst they lived, and for their souls after their departure hence, as also for all Christian souls; and that during their lives, there should be every day said, by the priest who was to perform that service, after "Confiteor" and "Miserentur," turning his face to the people, a "Pater noster" and "Ave" for the posterity of the said William and Agnes, and after their decease, for the souls of the said William and Agnes, and all Christian souls, as also, turning his face to the people, "De profundis clamavi;" with this Orison, "Inclina Domine aurem tuam ad preces nostras;" which Mass to be called William Harewell's mass.<sup>h</sup> Tanner says, there were tenements and gardens belonging to this House, valued at 4*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* per annum.<sup>i</sup> THOMAS NORMAN, the last Prior, Richard Walton, sacrist, Thomas Bacalaun, Nicholas Alexander sub-prior, John Watts, Richard Perse, John Tove, and Richard Pecke, surrendered this House to the King, October 20th, 1539.<sup>k</sup> The Site was granted, Jan. 5th, 5th Edw. VI., to John Duke of Northumberland; soon after which the Buildings were demolished.<sup>l</sup>

SALISBURY.

LELAND, in his Itinerary, speaking of the west suburb of Salisbury, called Fisherton Anger, says, "In this Fisscherton, was, sins the erection of the New Toun, an House of Blake Friars buildid not far from Fisssherton Bridge:"<sup>m</sup> to which, according to Tanner, King Edward the First was a considerable benefactor, if not founder.<sup>n</sup> It stood opposite to the spot where is now the common gaol for the county of Wilts. The Site, called the Friars Preachers, in the parish of St. Clement New Sarum, was granted, 7th April, 36th Hen. VIII., to John Pollard and William Byrte.<sup>o</sup>

BEVERLEY, in YORKSHIRE.

TANNER says, The House of Black Friars in this town occurs as early as A. D. 1311.<sup>s</sup> Leland, speaking of the Two Houses of Friars in Beverley, mentions "The BLAK FRERES, as sum say, of one Goldsmithes fundation, and so the Townes; but the Lord Darcy, of late tyme, strove for countess of Norfolk, temp. Edw. III., in another. But that lady only founded the chantry and fraternity mentioned in Dugd. Bar. vol. ii. p. 64, in the 28th Edw. III. Godwin, in libro De Præsul. Angl. p. 138, seems to ascribe it wholly to Archbishop Kilwardby.
